THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE
She Has Ever Known. Words of Praise from a New York Lady for AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for many years, and always derived the best results from their use. For stomach and liver troubles, and for the cure of headache caused by these derangements, Ayer's Pills cannot be equaled.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, or bowels, my invariable answer is, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will break up a cold, prevent la grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and are, indeed, the best all-round family medicine I have ever known."—MRS. MAY JOHNSON, 368 Rider Avenue, New York City.

LIGHT AND SHADOW.

You who judge by what you see,
Often fail to judge aright;
Stars are shining solemnly,
In the day as in the night;
All the day they lie concealed
By the glory of the sun,
But at eve they stand revealed
In the azure, one by one.

So the daylight of a smile
May but veil the human face
Hiding for a little while
Doubt and care and sorrow's trace;
So, when shadow clouds of woe
O'er a happy face arise,
Still beneath the shadows glow
Stars of joy in gentle eyes.

Life is arched with changing skies,
Rarely are they what they seem;
Smiles we have, and also sighs—
Much we know, but more we dream;
Look beneath the outward show,
To the shadow or the light,
And from what you rarely know
Learn to see and judge aright.

EXCHANGE OF ROLES.

All his life Charlie Stanhope had been quite ready to admit that his morals were somewhat faulty. Sometimes he admitted it genially, sometimes with a mild self reproach, but always with the air of being quite irresponsible for his failings, and indeed he was one of those men whom scarcely any one judges hardly. Good looks, a pleasant smile, an easy affectionateness and a generous hand are excellent covers for very serious faults if a too fervid liking for the good things of this life, including wine and women, is to be counted among them.

"Hang it, you know, a pretty woman can always make a fool of me," he used to acknowledge, "and I positively cannot help it. Lilian knows it too."

Lilian was Mrs. Stanhope, and she certainly had abundant reason to know it. Charlie had married her in a fit of infatuation for her beauty and amid the ominous prophecies of their friends as to their future happiness, and if the husband and wife had been philanthropically inclined they might have had the satisfaction of knowing that they still afforded a thrilling topic of conversation to their social circle.

In the course of five years of married life there had been much for Lilian to forgive, and Charlie had a habit of suddenly confessing himself to her and receiving absolution for his sins, under the shadow of which for a month he would live irreproachably, forswear his club, going to no supper parties and escorting his wife to afternoons and balls and reverting altogether to the husband-lover of their honeymoon. In very truth it is not too much to say that he loved and respected his wife above any living creature; only it was not in his nature to be faithful to any woman.

"You are a saint, Lilian, my pure white lily," he often said in his fits of remorse, "and I'm a black brute, not fit to kiss the hem of your dress."

And he thoroughly believed it, too, for the time being.

So when one morning he came down to breakfast and opened and read a certain letter that was lying on his plate he only experienced a furious anger against the author of it. It was written in a hand awkwardly sloped the wrong way and obviously feminine, and bore the ominous signature, "A Well Wisher," and contained nothing but a savage and coarse attack upon his wife, coupling her name with that of a man who had just been notoriously expelled from a smart club for cheating at cards. Charlie's handsome face flushed darkly, and he muttered a savage oath under his breath.

"What devils some women are! Can't they even leave Lilian alone? She, of all women in the world, to be written of so! It's that jade, Maud Bellair, I'm certain. She has never forgiven me for refusing to introduce her to Lilian. Well, I may be a blackguard myself, but my wife shall never speak to such women. She must never know of it. It would half kill her, and if I showed it to her she might, perhaps, think I suspected her. I suspect Lilian! Great heavens, what would the world be coming to—and to couple her name with Hugh Dacre's! It's a pity she didn't try to invent something a little more probable."

His faith in his wife was not shaken for an instant. No devout worshiper would think of dethroning his pure, white idol because some miscreant throws a clod of dirt at it, but the words of the letter fascinated him, as things impossible and monstrous do, and he was so absorbed in it that he did not heed a footstep coming through the open door, and started violently when a hand was laid on his arm and Lilian's voice said:

"Whatever are you scowling at so ferociously?"

"Oh, nothing of any consequence—a stupid letter," he said confusedly, trying to crumple it up; but his wife put her finger on it.

"Are you so anxious I shouldn't see it?" she said reproachfully.

"It isn't what you think at all, Lil," he said, guessing her suspicions. "It's not a letter from a woman—at least—I mean it's of no importance."

"Let me see it, then," she persisted gently, trying to draw it away.

"Oh, don't read it, dear. It's an abominable, shameful letter! I wouldn't have you pollute your eyes by reading it," he said, taken off his guard. "I entreat you not to read it!"

"Why, you must think I am something more than a woman to refrain after that," said Mrs. Stanhope, smiling as she drew it from his reluctant fingers.

She was a very lovely woman, slender and fair, with pathetic gray eyes and a serenely sad mouth, and the smile gave just the last touch her beauty wanted.

"Don't think I heed it for an instant! I know well enough who's done it," said Charlie nobly, but she held up her hand for silence, as she quickly read the sheet. He could see her eyes traveling from line to line; could see a flush quickly rise to her forehead, and as swiftly change to whiteness.

"Ah, Lil, my darling! I knew you could not stand it; I oughtn't to have let you read it," he said, catching at her as she swayed slightly, but she freed herself and stood facing him, with parted lips.

"Then you don't believe it?" she said slowly.

"Believe it! My God, what a question from you to me! My queen, my saint! As if I'd believe all the world against you!" he broke out, passionately. "I've been a bad lot myself, but do you think I don't know a good woman when I find one?"

"You'd believe me against all the world," she echoed, "but if I joined the world against myself what would you believe then?"

"I don't know what you mean. Don't jest on such a subject, and, trust me, I'll make the woman who wrote those lies smart for it."

"But they are not lies," said Lilian Stanhope slowly. "It is the simple truth."

He looked at her in utter bewilderment. What did she mean? What was she talking of? Was she out of her mind?

"You don't seem to understand," she said quietly. "Every word in that letter is true."

He did not answer, but still stood gazing at her. She had crossed over to the mantelpiece and stood with one elbow resting on it, her face turned toward him. The sleeve of her morning wrapper had slipped down, and he could see the curve of her round, white arm. Perhaps he would still have believed her if she had not suddenly smiled such a smile as he had never dreamt of on her face.

He did not know what he said—perhaps he only made some inarticulate cry—but he sank into a chair and hid his face in his hands from that look.

Neither of them spoke. It seemed to him that minutes were merging into eternity. The ticking of the clock on the mantelpiece was like the strokes of a hammer on his brain. His heart seemed shrinking under the touch of redhot iron.

Lilian vile! Oh, it was incredible, impossible, some hideous dream!

He raised his head again to look at her. Surely a lifetime had passed since that smile, and yet the clock had only marked three minutes.

"I am glad you know," said his wife. "I was so tired of pretending to be good." And she stretched her arms as one laying down a heavy burden. "I wonder you have never guessed it before."

"Guessed it! I—I reverenced you too much to insult you by a thought."

"You mean virtue was my role, and it was for you to play sinner. Oh, you were too egotistical. You wanted always to play lead."

"Oh, what did it matter how much I sinned? I was never good. But you! You have been a saint in heaven to me."

"No woman is ever a saint, and, remember, I have been your wife five years. I was good once, but your love has been a liberal education for me."

Her whole bearing seemed altered. The sweet sadness of the mouth had changed to mockery; her voice rang clear and hard. Every word struck home to his soul as nothing had ever done in the course of his gay, successful life.

"Then I have damned you and myself," he said hoarsely.

"Don't talk so primitively. We have been educated out of all that now," she answered. "There are hundreds of husbands and wives in our own case."

"But this man—Dacre"—he brought out the words as if they burned his lips. "You—you can't love him?"

She shrugged her shoulders carelessly.

"Love? What does it mean? He was sufficiently amusing. Did you love Lady Fancourt, Miss Bellair and—but why extend the list?"

"I? That is quite another thing. A man"— But he stopped short under the scorn of her eyes.

"What will you do? You can't divorce me. You could never appear in court with such a record as yours," she went on. "I don't see, myself, why this should make any difference to us. We know the truth about each other now and can be mutually complacent."

The vileness of such words on her lips was unbearable to him. He sprang up and caught her by both arms, studying every line of her face with savage intensity.

"Are you going to kill me?" she said, shrinking a little. "I did not take your confessions so tragically."

"I can't believe it. I can't understand it," he muttered. "You, who were worlds above me, to have sunk so much beneath me!"

"I think we are on a level footing now," she retorted. "Our sin is of the same quality."

"But I know myself for the blackguard I am, and you—oh, Lilian, don't you realize what it is for you?"

She shook her head slightly. A sudden hatred of him had sprung up in her, and instinctively she knew that nothing she could do or say would wring his heart as did her callous bearing.

He looked at her for an instant with despairing eyes and then caught her to him as if he would kiss her, but recoiled, and, loosing her, dashed roughly from the room.—St. Paul's.

Seems to Be a Long Lived Set.

A list of the losses which the Royal society has suffered by death during the past year shows that the pursuit of science is not unfavorable to longevity. The list comprises 19 fellows and seven foreign members, and the average lifetime of these 26 men was a fraction over 76¼ years. The average age of the seven foreign members was 79 years and 5 months, the oldest being Franz Ernst Neumann, 97, and the youngest Henri Ernest Baillon, 67. The 19 fellows had an average lifetime of 75 years and 7 months, the oldest being Bisset Hawkins, 98, and the youngest George Edward Dobson, 47. The fellows were not all scientific men, one of them being Lord Aberdare, 80, and another, the Earl of Selborne, 83, but statesmanship and law also seem to favor length of days.—London News.

DIDN'T GET WHAT SHE WANTED.

Bout of a Young Woman Who Undertook to Squelch a Grocery Clerk.

Two pretty young women entered a large up town grocery one evening last week. From their conversation it was evident that they belonged to some boarding school in the neighborhood and had stolen out for a few moments to buy dainties which they meant to smuggle to their rooms.

"There's one thing I don't like about the clerks in this store," said one of them, while they waited for the salesman, "and that's the way they insist on telling you that you don't want what you do want and that you do want what you don't want. Every time I come in here I have the same experience, and I'm just tired of it. The next time it happens I'm going to tell the clerk just what I think of him."

At that moment a clerk approached and asked the young women what they wanted. The one who had so much to complain about pointed at one of a row of cracker tins and said:

"I want a pound of those."

"Oh, no, you don't," said the clerk suavely; "you want some of these, or these here; they're all very nice."

The young woman threw a glance which said, "What did I tell you?" at her companion, and turning to the clerk said fiercely:

"No, I don't, anything of the kind. I want these and no others."

"I beg your pardon," he began, "I thought"—

"Never mind what you thought," said the young woman. "I guess I know what I want. Now just let me have a pound of those, please." And she turned to her companion with a look of triumph on her face which plainly meant, "Didn't I squelch him?"

"Very well, madam," said the clerk humbly, "but may I ask whether they are for yourself?"

"Well, of all the impertinent questions"— began the young woman, when her companion interrupted, and, turning to the clerk, said:

"Why do you ask?"

"Oh, because they're dog biscuit," replied the clerk indifferently. "Still, of course, if you want them, you can have them."

"Never mind," faltered the young woman who had insisted on having what she wanted. "I guess I don't want anything at all," and she strutted out of the store looking very much ashamed and followed by her companion, who was struggling to hide her laughter.

The clerk didn't say anything, but there was a satisfied smile on his face as he banged the cover down on the can of dog biscuit and walked away to wait on another customer.—New York Sun.

The Actress and Her Train.

The English stage has certain customs which greatly hurt a Frenchman who is not used to them. The last scene of every act is constantly interrupted, and sometimes in the most interesting part, by the tinkling of a little bell, which apprises the music to be ready to play in the interval between the acts. The actresses who perform the principal characters drag long trains after them, which have but four corners, like a carpet, the breadth proportioned to the importance of the character, and they are followed by a little boy in quality of a train bearer, who is as inseparable from them as the shadow from the body. This page, who is sprucely dressed and muffled up in a livery made to suit his stature within two or three inches, keeps his eye constantly fixed upon the train of the princess, sets it to rights when it is ever so little ruffled or disordered and is seen to run after it with all his might when a violent emotion makes the princess hurry from one side of the stage to the other. This he does with all the phlegm and seriousness natural to the English.

In one play in the scene between the king and the queen—"in the moment which is to separate them forever the king flies into the arms of the queen, who embraces her royal consort, and they continue clasping each other in transport, which excites in the whole audience the strongest emotions"—who can be affected to so high a degree as not to take notice of the attention of the little page to repair the disorder which the queen's train constantly receives as she stirs and moves with impassioned attitudes in the arms of the afflicted monarch?—Grasley's "London In 1756."

They Are Professional Guests.

Some gentlemen of family who are clever at story, jest and repartee are following a strange business in London. There is a man there who furnishes amusement and entertainment for all kinds of social gatherings, having men of family on his staff, who in the guise of guests manage to insure an enjoyable evening for the invited guests, and thus set the anxiety of the hostess, fearing a dull time for her guests, at rest. A couple of guineas will engage the services of a person of "good social attainments," who will so exercise his art of entertaining others as to put everybody at once into the brightest of spirits. Five guineas will command the services of an individual of "higher standing in the social scale," while the proportionately large outlay of $50 will secure those of a gentleman with a handle to his name.

Precious Perfume.

Scores of bottles which once contained perfumes have been found in Pompeii. In one jar having a capacity of two gallons there was a very delicate and ethereal perfume, the composition of which is not known. There was over a gallon of the liquid left in the receptacle, but upon being exposed to the air it began to evaporate so rapidly that the bottle was hermetically sealed in order to retain it.

The manuscripts of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries are, in many cases, almost illegible on account of the fading of the ink. At that time the lampblack inks passed out of use and chemical inks became popular.

INDEX-TRIBUNE

SONOMA, FEBRUARY 22, 1896.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR.

THE twenty-second of February is peculiarly an American day; but it is as well a world's day. Great men are not of one place and one time; they are of all places and all times; they breathe the spirit of truth and so are properly adjusted to every climate and to every age. Washington is not remembered solely because he was Liberty's great general and first President; we also remember him because his thoughts and actions were such that we understand him. Placed under similar circumstances we feel that we should have done as he did. He seems to be present with us in thought. Greatness is evident because it is true, and there is no greatness divorced from truth. There are some who profess to believe that Washington was not possessed of a great mind, but such do not see clearly. Napoleon without doubt had a gigantic intellect, but we see only the brain that ordered armies with the ease that ordinary men guide themselves. Bonaparte, however, was not a great man in the fullest sense of the word. He did things which he knew to be wrong, and whoever does so is not great he is weak and petty. But turn to Washington. Here we have a man whose conscience directed his path, whose brain was so closely knit with his actions and his conscience that he was right. We do not marvel and say, "here was a colossal intellect," for every part of his life, public or private, was so governed that he was in sympathy and touch with humanity and his God, and so he is natural and we understand him. Had his life been impure, had his living been divorced from his thinking we should hear much more of his intellect, but it was not, so we cling to that which appeals to us the most strongly and safely say such and such things were done, and done well, the results are great, we cannot see that he could have done more, so we are satisfied that of necessity he was great; we have no other standard by which to judge.

WE are all pleased to say that Paderewski is a genius, or that he is possessed of genius. We are prone to look upon him as a man especially endowed with some quality of mind that not all of us enjoy. Such may be the case, but till the time comes when we shall know all about the quality and action of the brain we cannot state with certainty what genius is. Still as we look over the lives of those men who, by common consent, have been termed geniuses we cannot fail to notice one prominent factor in their developement. That is work. Even now Paderewski practices seven hours a day. Edison works from ten to twenty hours a day. Some one has defined genius as being a capacity for taking infinite pains. Whether this be true or not it is certain that genius takes infinite pains. Not necessarily in the performance but before, as preparation. Genius can easily do what ordinary men find difficult, because it is prepared. There is no friction or hesitation; different experiences are linked together, for they have been intelligently noted, so when the time to act arrives our genius is ready to do the right thing.

THERE has been lots of talk wasted and ink spilled over the Brown scandal. From one point of view Mr. Brown is nothing more nor less than a man. From another point he is looked upon as the head of a great church, the interpeter of the Word of the living God with many under his care and guidance. But in either case if he has sinned he should be punished, for it is difficult to believe that he had not the moral support and surroundings necessary to a clean life. Such an occurrence as this does more harm to the cause of Christianity than a hundred preachers can remedy. Christianity is judged by the lives its professors lead, and if those who minister at her altars and bid us taste her delights are worldly and practice the things they condemn, can the man who does not understand her precepts be censured if he doubts the usefulness of the church as a living testimony to Christ?

IF all the bestotted, lying schemes hitherto used by mortal man to defraud a people were triturated, distilled and condensed the final essence would breathe of Faith, Hope and Charity, when compared with the sooty exhalations of Huntington. It is this moral monsters habit to quote the enemies of the Funding Bill as speaking in its favor. If it be not impious to express the feeling the people of California wish that Mr. H. were in h—.

If there is any one thing that needs to be purified, it is politics, so the reformer says, and many agree thereto. But blood tells, and as a blood purifier and liver corrector Simmons Liver Regulator is the best medicine. "I use it in preference to any other."—So wrote Mr. S. M. Hysell, of Middleport, Ohio. And Dr. D. S. Russell, of Farmville, Va., writes, "It fulfills all you promise for it."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Capt. Oliver and his little son while driving into town on Monday last had a narrow escape from serious injury. In attempting to turn a corner near his farm his cart, which is a very high one, was overturned. Both were thrown violently to the ground but fortunately clear of the cart and the struggling horse. The Captain escaped without a scratch but the little fellow was slightly cut and bruised about the face and head. One of the lamps of the cart was smashed and the harness somewhat damaged.

Pursued by a Demon.

How many suicides, think you, reader, have been committed by persons driven distraught and hunted to their doom by the demon of chronic ill health? Countless. For instance, we know, do we not, that hypochondriasis is a monomania—a sort of minor madness produced by chronic dyspepsia? Again, insomnia, or sleeplessness, often a result of the same cause, culminates in a derangement of the reasoning faculties. It is, therefore, of momentous consequence to prevent the arrival of disease at its chronic phase, when it daily and nightly scourges the sufferer to a dangerously uncertain goal. No medicine known to science, as a means of arresting the maladies to which it is adopted, exists equal to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Among these complaints are chronic indigestion and insomnia, kidney and rheumatic ailments, constipation and liver trouble. Appetite is improved by the Bitters, the blood fertilized, and bodily substance and vigor increased by it.

Interesting Literary Exercises at the Home.

The usual weekly literary exercises were held at the Home for Feeble-Minded last Saturday before quite a number of visitors. The children in their songs, recitations, drills and musical selections did remarkably well. This institution, which has been under the care of Dr. Osborne ever since it was started several years ago, who by the way is one of the hardest worked officials in California, is a model of neatness and good management. The State is very fortunate in having a Superintendent over the institution who is peculiarly qualified to fill the position. Later on we will make more extended mention of the Home and its equipments.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

The Sans Souci Minstrels.

On Saturday evening, February 22d, at 8 o'clock sharp, there will be presented at Union Hall, Sonoma, a grand minstrel entertainment given by the Sans Souci Minstrels direct from their successes in San Francisco. The company is composed of the best of performers and the songs, jokes and witticisms are up to date and way ahead. There will not be a lagging part in the whole performance, and the numbers will go with a slap, bang from start to finish. The following comedians comprise the end men in the first part: Jack Cathcart, Eddy Sweeney, Geo. Crandall, Ed. Mayers, Jim Clark and Jim Sheppard. The vocalists are Frank Gibb, Wm. Hallett, A. G. Cliff, Chas. Hart, Winn McDonald and Harvey Richards. Mr. Wm. Hallett will occupy the interlocutors chair. All the latest songs will be introduced. The first part will conclude with a grand finale, entitled "Mulrooney's Visit," and the second part is as follows: Biven and Gibb, musical artists; W. A. Allen, whistling selections; John McDonald, in his own creation, entitled "Paderwhiskey;" Hallett and Cathcart, singing comedians; Eddy Sweeney, Senator at Large; Ed. Mayers, the black face comedian; Geo. Crandall, for a few moments; Condon and Martin, bar experts, and the Acme Male Quartette in selections. The price of admission will be at the nominal sum of 50 cents.

A social hop lasting till 12 o'clock will follow the entertainment.

THRILLING RUNAWAY.

Narrow Escape of Judge Breitenbach.

A thrilling runaway took place last Thursday afternoon. Two horses harnessed together got away from their owner, Louis Ferera, and rushed down Spain street from the vicinity of Weyl's corner. Upon reaching First street East they took to the sidewalk in front of Pinelli's building and kept straight ahead the entire distance of the block, some six hundred feet. Upon reaching Duhring's corner one of the animals slipped on the stone pavement and was thrown into the middle of the street, so great was the momentum. Here they became detached from one another. One of the animals was secured, but the other continued his flight up Napa street and may be running yet for aught we know. As the affrighted animals came tearing down the sidewalk a number of pedestrians had to flee for their lives, seeking safety in the stores and dwellings along that street. The horses were almost upon Judge Breitenbach, who was walking leisurely along, before he realized his peril. It was too late to seek safety in one of the stores and just as the animals were about to run him down he stepped quickly from off the sidewalk into the street as the runaways brushed by him. It was a thrilling and narrow escape for the Judge.

Reduction in Transportation of Wine.

The San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company on the 20th inst. adopted a new schedule of rates on the transportion of wine and the return of empty puncheons. The reduction taken as a whole will effect a saving to shippers of five or six dollars per carload. The new rate per ton by the carload varies between $1.30 and $2.00 from Sonoma Valley towns to San Francisco or vice versa. For instance the rate from Sonoma is $1.30, from Agua Caliente $1.70 and from Glen Ellen $2.00. There is nothing small about the S. F. & N. P. Railway and it is always willing to do the right thing by its patrons. The reduction is made to encourage the wine industry of Sonoma Valley on the one hand and on the other to eventually increase the revenue of the road from that source.

Held the Fort.

Quite an intellectual sag at Santa Rosa and other towns in this county was caused last Tuesday by the exodus of nine members of the Sonoma County Bar to San Francisco on business connected with the Supreme Court. On the early train of that day were Messrs. Rutledge, Ware, Gale, Burnett, Pearce, Sims, Lippitt, Rodgers and Poppe. Serious inconvenience to litigants was avoided by the fact that counselor Mrs. F. McG. Martin remained at Santa Rosa and held the fort until the others returned.

Families visiting Sonoma will find the Sonoma House a first-class hotel in every respect. *

R. B. LYON DEAD.

One of the Oldest Odd Fellows in Sonoma Valley.

For Forty-One Years a Member of Sonoma Lodge.

R. B. Lyon is dead. He breathed his last at his home on Broadway in this place on Sunday afternoon last, after an illness of several weeks. He was conscious to the very last and just before he expired he bade his wife and daughters a final farewell. Brother Lyon was a pioneer resident of Sonoma, having located here in 1854, after a long and adventurous journey across the plains by ox-team. Upon arriving here he entered into the blacksmith business and shortly after was married to Miss H. Akers, daughter of the venerable Judge Akers of Embarcadero. The result of the union was three daughters all of whom are married, to wit: Mrs. C. L. Ennis, wife of Deputy Superintendent of Schools Ennis of Los Angeles, Mrs. Wm. Thomas, wife of ex-Bonded Warehouse Keeper Thomas and Mrs. Albert F. Pauli, wife of the manager of Dresel's winery.

The deceased was probably one of the oldest Odd Fellows in this county. For forty-one years he was a member of Sonoma Lodge, No. 28. He was a Past Noble Grand and well up in the work of the order in which he took great interest. It was his proud boast just before he was taken sick that, although he had been a member of Sonoma Lodge for forty-one years, he had never been sick a day or drawn a sick benefit, and it was so.

Mr. Lyon was also a member of Pueblo Lodge, No. 168, A. O. U. W., of this place and his life was insured in that order for $2,000.

The deceased was a native of Missouri and was aged 63 years two months and seven days. He leaves besides his wife and three daughters a large number of relatives in Sonoma Valley.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon from his late residence on Broadway under the auspices of Sonoma Lodge, No. 28, I. O. O. F., and was the largest seen in Sonoma for a number of years. Requiescat in pace.

THE DONAHUE RAILWAY SUIT.

Smith and Stetsen Win—Probable Change in the Management.

Judge Angelotti of Marin county on Thursday last decided that Sydney V. Smith may vote his stock in the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway as he sees fit.

Should he vote his stock in the interest of Mr. Stetsen, who recently purchased the 18,000 shares from the Seligmans, it will give that gentleman contral of the road which has been so ably managed the past few years by President Foster. The election for officers of the road, which was postponed pending the decision of the suit, will now be held.

The Assault Case.

The preliminary examination of Frank Burris, Henry Bates and Dan Burris, charged with assaulting Clark Gaines, took place last Thursday before Judge Cheney. Attorneys A. G. Burnett and Fred T. Duhring represented the defendants. Assistant District Attorney Butts and Lawyer Weber of Santa Rosa conducted the prosecution. After listening to evidence and argument of counsel Judge Cheney discharged Dan Burris and held the other defendants to answer before the Superior Court in bonds of $500 each.

Morello.

The whereabouts of the celebrated race horse Morello is at present unknown except to Porter Ashe and a few trusted employes. The horse was rushed furiously out of town on Friday afternoon of last week immediately after the attachment upon him had been released, being spirited away to prevent further attachments upon the animal, which has been in the keeping of Granville Harris for several weeks pending attachment proceedings.

W. F. Wade & Co.

This firm, which has a large picture framing establishment on Kearny street, San Francisco, is picking up considerable Sonoma Valley trade. Mr. Wade, the senior member of the firm, is a resident of this place and makes almost daily trips to and from the city. In order to accomodate our people he has placed on exhibition at his residence at Buena Vista, near the eastern terminus of Napa street, samples of his moulding and pictures, which the general public is invited to inspect. He is enlarging pictures and selling mouldings for frames cheaper than any other house in San Francisco. The work turned out by his firm will compare favorably with that of any other house in the metropolis.

GRAND JURY REPORT

Goes After Everything in Sight—Ex-County Officials Raked Over the Coals.

Ex-County Recorder "Our Gil" and the Supervisors of 1892 Badly Singed.

The Grand Jury, which has been in session off and on the past three or four months, made its report to the Superior Court of this county on Saturday afternoon last. The Grand Jury goes after the scalps of Gil P. Hall, ex-County Recorder, the Supervisors of 1892, of which M. K. Cady of Agua Caliente was a forcible member, and everything else in sight in the way of official shortcomings. The report, which is signed by B. M. Spencer, a promnent merchant of Santa Rosa, is as follows:

TO THE HON. R. F. CRAWFORD, SUPERIOR JUDGE OF SONOMA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA:—Your Grand Jury herewith beg leave to report that we commenced our labors October 9th, 1895; that we remained in session four days and then adjourned till November 11th, 1895, when we remained in session six days.

In the meantime Expert Neilsen discovered that Fee Book No. 13 was missing from the Hall of Records, and other irregularities, as shown in expert's report, which required more time and labor to unravel the mixed state of affairs. We therefore again adjourned to December 9th, 1895, when we remained in session for six days, again adjourning to February 15th, 1896.

Our reason for adjourning in December for such a long period was to allow Expert Neilsen ample time to go back in his investigations of the Treasurer's office to the beginning of last term of ex-Treasurer Stofen, or as far as might be necessary to satisfy us and the public that no deficiency occurred in the Treasurer's office prior to the alleged robbery, December 28th, 1894. We should not have adopted such an unusual course if we had not reasons to doubt the thoroughness of the last expert. Expert Baldwin lacked in thoroughness and failed in duty by not reporting to the last Grand Jury the suspicious shrinkage in the receipts of the Recorder's office in 1893 and 1894. We make this explanation also in justice to the last Grand Jury.

We now give a somewhat condensed report of our last proceedings:

The whole Grand Jury inspected the County Farm and Hospital, the Jail, Hall of Records and the various county offices in the Court-house, and found the same in good condition with slight exceptions, as noted elswhere in our report.

We make the following recommendations in connection with the County Hospital and Poor Farm. First, that the management of the County Hospital and Poor Farm should cause the books of the institutions to be kept in such a manner as to show in itemized form the various receipts and expenditures of every nature for every month, together with a general account of these institutions, showing the total receipts and disbursements. They should also cause the books to be balanced at the end of each calendar year.

Second—That, whereas the expenditures for alcoholic and fermented beverages amounted during the year ending October 31st, 1895, to the sum of $267.87, exclusive of numerous entries in druggists' bills for one-half gallon of alcohol, "port wine" and other tonics. We recommend that no alcoholic supplies be furnished for these institutions except for medical purposes.

Third—That the annual expenditure of over $200 for tobacco be immediately stopped.

Fourth—That all old soldiers be removed either to Yountville or Santa Monica Soldiers' Home.

Fifth—That the water tank at the County Hospital be raised at least 26 feet in order to get sufficient force in the hose pipes about the buildings to be effective in case of fire.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

That new marriage license books be made with stubs and that every license be numbered consecutively so that every license can be traced and accounted for by the County Clerk.

That the accumulated fund of $70, collected for recording marriages, which were not recorded by the parties interested, be paid to the county treasury.

That a regular index be made for all wills which have been copied into the will books, or which shall hereafter be probated and transcribed.

That the County Clerk be requested to carefully follow the requirements of the law with regard to the collection of all court fees.

That section 13 of county ordinance No. 33 be amended by adding as follows: "That one-half of the fines collected in all such cases shall be paid to the person or persons giving such information as will secure the conviction of parties selling liquor illegally."

That the law be strictly enforced with reference to collecting licenses for exhibitions and theatrical entertainments by traveling troupes in all parts of the county.

We recommend that the railing or grating outside of counter in Treasurer's office be extended to the ceiling and that a heavy grating be placed outside of all windows in the Treasurer's office.

That a guard be employed in the jail whose duty it shall be to remain in the jail exclusively.

That the jail be rearranged so as to separate the different classes of prisoners, and thus comply with the requirements of the law as stated in section 1598 of the Penal Code.

That the attention of the Supervisors be drawn to the disgraceful condition of the hall and stairway leading to the cupola of the Court House.

That all doors leading into the offices from the lower hall of the Court House should have glass panels on the upper half of the doors.

That a ladies' toilet room be constructed on the second floor of the Court House, and that same be off corridor west of the District Attorney's private room, by running a partition across his room.

In experting the accounts of ex-County Clerk Wines we find a shortage of fees that was not collected and paid into the treasury until after this body commenced its labors. His books should have been balanced when he retired from office. As it now stands several hundred dollars were paid to the present County Clerk. We are in doubt about Mr. Fulton's right to receive said money from ex-Clerk Wines.

In view of the innumerable failures of justice and the frequent acquittals of criminals through the stupidity, obstinacy and venality of even one juryman, as well as the lack of confidence in the administration of justice, as shown by the many cases of lynchings, we respectfully draw the attention of our representatives in the State Legislature to the crying need for a change in our present jury system, at least so far as to do away with the requirements of a unanimous verdict in criminal cases. If a three-fourth majority could convict we believe there would be little encouragement for new trials; the enormous expense of our courts would be very materially reduced, and life and property be made more secure.

We recommend the Supervisors to advertise for bids for the burial of all indigent dead, at least from the County Farm and Hospital and that the contract be let to the lowest bidder, subject, of course, to cancellation at any time if the contractor fails to fully comply with the terms of his contract.

RECOMMENDATIONS ON PRINTING.

We, the Grand Jury, hereby most respectfully request the Board of Supervisors to advertise for bids from all printing offices in the county for printing the Great Register for 1896, believing that the price paid for 1000 copies of the last Register at 2½ cents per name ($2,050, paid November 20, 1894) to be an excessive charge.

We would also earnestly recommend that hereafter at all county elections the offices of County Recorder and Auditor be separated and another office be made in the Court House. We would suggest for this purpose the room now occupied as the Horticultural hall.

We believe that there should be some person to act as check on the Recorder other than himself, and that Sonoma county has outgrown the condition where the Recorder can safely be expected to keep the books of the county.

That about $8,000 is due to the county treasury from P. N. Stofen, the ex-County Treasurer.

That about $5,000 is due to the county treasury from ex-Recorder Gil P. Hall.

That indictments at the present time will be an injudicious way to proceed for the recovery of said amounts now due the county, one of the said accounts now being in the Superior Court, the other in the hands of the Supervisors and District Attorney for collection.

That much valuable data will be furnished by Expert Neilsen and our special committee to the District Attorney when required in the above matters.

EXPERT BALDWIN.

O. T. Baldwin, who has been experting the county's books for five or six years, appeared before the Grand Jury voluntarily, and asked to be heard in his own defense. Upon being granted a hearing he addressed the jury about as follows:

"I have heard that the books of one of the county officers shows a shortage, and owing to the fact that I as expert failed to discover anything wrong with these same books during the last three or four years, I am accused of collusion and whitewashing, and I now and here demand a rigid and searching examination into this matter."

After being assured that the matter would be rigidly investigated, Mr. Baldwin retired. The examination demanded by Mr. Baldwin has been made, and it developed the fact that Mr. Baldwin did not expert the books at all, but confined himself to the footings only. This, if not collusion is, to say the least, gross negligence on the part of an expert.

That the Grand Jury wishes to speak in the highest terms commendatory of the fairness, care and untiring work of Expert C. H. Neilsen in his efforts to clear up the large amount of irregular work which exists in some of the county offices as shown by the reports hereto attached.

Your Grand Jury desires to call your attention to the bill hereunto attached of $3,850 00, purporting to be for seventeen books copied by Gil P. Hall, Recorder, we find:

That said bill is not an itemized bill as required by law.

That the bill was made by Gil P. Hall and L. W. Julliard jointly, both persons' handwriting appearing in the bill; that the minutes of the Supervisors do not show that work in this bill was ever ordered.

That this bill was never ordered paid by Supervisors according to the minutes.

That price paid for books was $225 per volume, both large and small.

That a careful estimate of the work done, and sizes of books copied, that about 10,000 folios were charged for in the bill more than could be in the said seventeen books, which at the apparant price of 12 cents per folio would indicate an overcharge of $1,200 in this bill.

[Copy of bill and warrant of G. P. Hall attached.]

Your jury believe that the Supervisors for 1892 are deserving of censure in permitting the affairs of Sonoma county to be so conducted.

Your jury desire to call the attention of the present Board of Supervisors to subdivision 11 of section 25, of the amendments of 1893, requiring them to audit the books and accounts of the county offices, or officers that handle the money of the county once in six months.

At our last session we passed the following resolutions:

That having spent much time in the examination of witnesses in connection with the alleged robbery of the county treasury, and having heard the supplementary report of the expert on the accounts of ex-Treasurer Stofen, this Grand Jury hereby records its opinion that the accounts of ex-Treasurer Stofen are correct up to 1894, and we could find no explanation of the reported deficiency of nearly $8,000, except a real or pretended robbery.

That we request the Board of Supervisors to instruct the County Treasurer to collect from District Attorney Seawell the $100 retained by him out of the $300 fine collected from N. D. Reynolds February 12, 1895.

That the County Treasurer be instructed to collect from District Attorney Seawell the $120 paid by the county to J. R. Leppo as fees for representing the District Attorney in the prosecution of the criminal charges against Eaton.

That we request the Supervisors to instruct the District Attorney to collect the over-payment in salaries to the retiring county officers January 7th, 1895, amounting in all to $313.40.

That it is the opinion of the Grand Jury that the pollution of the streams and water courses of this county by sewerage, outflow from manufactories, etc., is not only a violation of the law, but is fraught with the greatest peril to the lives and interests of the whole community.

CRIMINAL COMPLAINTS.

The following cases came up before us for investigation.

1. Complaint of fraud and land sale.
2. Complaints of detention or stealing of horses.
3. Complaints for perjury.

After hearing testimony on both sides the cases were dismissed, the evidence not being sufficient to secure a conviction.

We were also called on to investigate the case of suicide at the Fountain Grove farm, but could not find who was to blame for the young woman's rash act.

We also investigated complaints against two members of Council of City of Santa Rosa for selling goods to the city. We found, after examining over thirty witnesses, that nothing dishonest was proven against them; but, in our opinion, a good law was evaded, and we question the propriety and good taste of members of Council selling goods to the city.

We also had a cross-complaint against the City Street Commissioner and we believe that he has been guilty of reprehensible conduct in using time for which he was drawing pay from the city to make several trips into the country to procure and make evidence against the City Council; also in laying curbing down for private citizens at the expense of the city, and selling dirt from the streets without making returns to the city for the same; but, as he has covered his tracks carefully, and collected by proxy, we feel that we are scarcely warranted in indicting him for embezzlement.

[Then follows Expert Neilsen's statistical reports numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.]

All of which is most respectfully submitted. B. M. SPENCER, Foreman.

A Valise On Fire.

A valise in the baggage car of the S. F. & N. P. Railway was discovered to be on fire on Tuesday afternoon last as the train was about to pull out of Tiburon. The fire could not be extinguished until Conductor Hunter found the owner and secured the key to the same. The smoking valise was then opened and it was discovered that it contained a quantity of underwear, belonging to a lady passenger, which had been ignited by a bunch of matches that had been carelessly left in the valise.

CAUGHT HIS TRAIN ON HORSEBACK.

A Runaway Locomotive Had Many Sleeping Passengers In Tow.

Early one morning the engineer and fireman of the Santa Fe overland train, bound east, when near Cajon pass, imagined they saw something on the track right ahead. Thinking the train was about to be wrecked they both jumped. The engineer was rather badly hurt, but when the fireman picked himself up out of the dust he found that the engine had made kindling wood of a wagon to which two horses had been attached. The driver had seen the headlight of the engine and had jumped in time to save himself, and the animals themselves were cropping the dried grass along the roadside, which showed that they had not been greatly disturbed by the accident.

But the train, with nobody at the engine's throttle, was plunging away through the darkness, the passengers asleep in their berths, utterly unconscious that they were being drawn by a wild locomotive.

The fireman, who had been left behind, thought he would try to overtake the flying train on foot. Then he changed his mind and, jumping astride one of the horses, he set out after the runaway train. He knew it must stop shortly, as it had to climb a very steep grade, and if the fire under the boilers was not kept up the supply of steam would not furnish sufficient pressure to keep the wheels going around. The vagrant train did stop a mile and a half from where the accident occurred. There did not seem to be any reason for an interruption of the journey just at that point, and so the conductor and brakeman hurried ahead with their lanterns to ask the engineer what had given out.

When they found the cab empty, of course the trainhands were very much mystified. They asked each other a good many questions, and were engaged in looking up theories to account for the strange disappearance of the engine crew when the fireman came loping along on the horse he had borrowed. After explanation had been made, he turned his horse toward this city and brought the first tidings the railroad people had of the missing train. A hack was sent out to the scene with another engineer, and as soon as steam was raised the overland went on over the hill through Cajon pass. The same carriage brought the injured engineer to the city.—San Francisco Examiner.

ARTISTS AND TRADESMEN.

In the Early Days the Former Had a Struggle to Live.

Among the artists resident in Glasgow who had acquired before 1840 somewhat of a reputation Graham Gilbert, Horatio Macculloch and Daniel Macnee are those most widely known to general fame. To these men fell the prizes of the profession such as they were at that time. Prices were then on a scale that would not please the popular landscape and portrait painters of today.

The smaller men—not very numerous, it is true, and yet some of them most deserving—had a tolerably hard struggle for existence and had to eke out their income by other work than that of regular picture painting. Macculloch and Macnee themselves made money in their younger days by decorating the lids of snuffboxes. The average painter was frequently pretty much of a bohemian, living from hand to mouth and glad to clear off a tradesman's bill by painting the portraits of the worthy shopkeeper and his wife.

One of our best known artists tells how on occasion in the long years ago when he was engaged at a sitter's house on the portraits of a successful clergyman and his family the dinner hour arrived. He was not considered "genteel" enough to be asked to take a place at the table, but the mistress of the house kindly sent to the parlor, where he was working, a pate of stewed rhubarb to keep him from wearying while the family fed.—Magazine of Art.

An Old Soldier's Recommendation.

In the late war I was a soldier in the First Maryland Volunteers, Company G. During my term of service I contracted chronic diarrhoea. Since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief it would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was brought to my notice. I used it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and no bad results follow. I take pleasure in recommending this preparation to all of my old comrades, who, while giving their services to their country, contracted this dreadful disease as I did, from eating unwholesome and uncooked food. Yours truly, A. E. BENDING, Halsey, Oregon. For sale by all dealers.

Attempted Assault.

A young man named Corbally was arrested Saturday by Constable Peerman on a charge of attempting an assault on a little girl. He met the girl, who was playing with her brother on Santa Rosa Creek on the outskirts of town. He threw a flower over the bank and asked the brother to go down and get it. While the brother went after it Corbally is alleged to have assaulted the girl, who screamed loudly and which frightened the young man, who jumped into his buggy and drove into town. He was arrested and afterwards admitted to bail.—Santa Rosa Democrat.

Is a Countess and a Brewer.

A unique occupation for a woman is reported from Berlin. The proprietor of a large brewery there received a request from a Russian lady to be shown the interior arrangements of the brewery. After looking at various processes through which the golden beverage has to go the lady inquired for several details of the pneumatic machinery in the malthouse, which proved to the brewer, to his great surprise, that she was perfectly familiar with every detail of the entire complicated machinery. Upon inquiry it was learned that the lady, a Russian countess, had a large acreage of barley growing on her estate, and in order to increase her revenue from this source she had built a brewery, which she managed all alone. She was interested very much in the pneumatic malting apparatus because she could not get skilled labor necessary for the production of malt on her Russian estates. Tasting the product of the Berlin brewery, she stated that her own beer was not much inferior to the German product. When a few days later the brewer received some samples of the lady's Russian beer, he pronounced it excellent and not inferior in any respect to the best Bohemian or German beer. This lady is believed to be the only woman brewer in Europe.—Philadelphia Record.

Cloth Made From Peat.

Peat fiber can be bleached to snowy whiteness and will dye any color. One of the great advantages of cloth made from peat fiber is that it is entirely antiseptic and possesses properties which render it inimical to parasitical organism. In appearance the finer makes are quite equal to the best tweeds and closely resemble the camel's hair cloth.
